Veterinary Nurse • Auckland Zoo

I have been a veterinary nurse for over 25 years. I started my career looking after dogs and cats but during my OE moved to working with sea turtles and eventually in a major UK zoo for seven years. I have worked at Auckland Zoo since my return to NZ nine years ago and have been lucky to participate in treating a significant number of native NZ wildlife at the zoo, which is made possible by our conservation fund.

My particular interest as a veterinary nurse lies in problem solving. I enjoy the challenge of working with lesser-understood species and finding ways to treat them in a way that is in sympathy with their particular habits and adaptations.
